MFL/French: L'Étranger by Albert Camus with UEA - June 10

On 10th June we are running a University Book Club with UEA in which Dr Ilse Renaudie, Associate Professor in French Language, will discuss L'Étranger by Albert Camus.

We will explore the key themes and language of the novel, inviting the audience to shape the discussion with presubmitted and live questions and thoughts. This is an excellent opportunity for students studying French to hear a wide range of different perspectives and interpretations of the text in a relaxed and rewarding environment.

Law and Criminology Free University Experience - The University of Bradford

In this fascinating and intriguing Subject Spotlight, Assistant Professor Edward Mowlam and Dr Gareth Addidle present Modern slavery: County Lines Drug Trading in the UK, a topic prevalent on both the Law LLB and BA (Hons) Criminology and Criminal Behaviour courses. Edward begins by outlining what constitutes Modern Slavery, the history of slavery, and why important legislation has been introduced in a contemporary society to prevent the exploitation of humans. He goes on to introduce a form of modern slavery known as county lines, and what it encompasses. Edward also looks at the specifics of legislation that tries to combat county lines crimes, as well as the offences and defences involved in county lines. Dr Gareth Addidle then puts a more criminological spin on the Spotlight by presenting a case study which focuses on the TV Series 'Top Boy', and reflecting on its accuracy and impact on the issue of county lines, focussing on the importance of education surrounding the prevention of Modern Slavery. He closes the Spotlight by discussing some important terminology regarding social harm, questioning whether the law can keep up with new crimes and get ahead, before finally setting you an activity that examines three potential victims of Modern Slavery.
